THAW WINS VICTORY

Clergyman-Slayer and His Daughter Fight Now Goes TO THE GOVERNOR

PREACHER GOES TO IN CELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—In the belief that he has committed other murders than that of Anna Amos, the girl whose torso was found in the Hudson River, the police today planned to put Hans Schmidt, the clergyman who confessed to slaying the girl, through an examination intended to force him to reveal every act of his sordid past.

Schmidt is today a raving fiend to the observation ward of the insane in the observation ward of the Tombs Prison, pronounced by Warden Fallon, the head of the prison, to be apparently the most complete lunatic he has encountered in his forty years of experience with criminals and madmen.

After a night spent in a cell in "Murder's Row," his eccentric account of the same sort of a crime that Schmidt confessed he had perpetrated, the self-acknowledged slayer of Anna Amos, the beautiful dismembered Hudson River mystery victim, was brought before Deputy Commissioner of Correction Wright and Warden Fallon.

So completely bewildered were both the officials by the clergyman's ramblings and ravings that he was ordered at once to the observation ward.

That Schmidt was a counterfeiter as well as a murderer came to light today through the arrest shortly after midnight of Ernest Arthur Murel, a bogus dentist, and Bertha Zech, his girl assistant.

Murel, under a morose grilling by the police, not only admitted that he knew both Schmidt and the murdered girl, but also confessed that Schmidt had been a partner of his in a counterfeiting scheme.

Immediately after the arrest the police raided Murel's flat and also another flat which it has been found was rented jointly last June by Murel and Schmidt.

In the latter flat was found a complete counterfeiting outfit including chemicals, tools, a printing press, several half-dozens bogus bills and a hundred revolver.

In the flat in which Murel lived were found a number of counterfeit bills.

Auto Speeder Glad He Was Arrested

"I was guilty of everything, and am glad to pay a fine for it. I think any man who drives an automobile at over thirty miles an hour ought to be fined," said Edward K. Deane, of German Hill, Weymouth, when he appeared in the New York court today. Deane was fined $10.

May Find Secret of Sex, Says Sir Oliver

BRISTOL, Eng., Sept. 16.—Plants may tell us the secret of sex, Sir Oliver Lodge told the British Association at its meeting. Referring to the fact that some plants produce both male and female flowers, he said this must be the result of some profound change in the sap at the junction in the stems where differently sexed flowers branch away from each other. He added:

"I do not know what this is and the microscopist tells me nothing. Perhaps if physiologists could find out what happens at the junction in the stems where differently sexed flowers branch away from each other, they might get a clue to the reason why some human beings are born boys and others girls."

Havemeyer's Estate Goes to 4 Children

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—William F. Havemeyer divided his estate equally among his children. In his will, just filed, he provided that $5,000 should be paid to Lydia V. Melles of Pennsylvania, N. J., a friend of the family, before the children are given their bequest. The children are Mrs. Martha J. Wilson, wife of William Wilson, Arthur, Hector and Raymond Havemeyer, sons.

Scores Escape as Flyer Leaves Rail

COATESVILLE, Pa., Sept. 16.—A broken rail on No. 1 truck of the Pennsylvania Railroad caused a disastrous passenger wreck at 6:20 a. m. today. It was only by good fortune that many persons aboard were not killed when train No. 42, known as the Pittsburgh Flyer, continued, went off the rails after the locomotive and five coaches had passed the defective points. Three sleeping coaches, occupied by seventy-five passengers, were derailed and only a tangle of poles prevented them from rolling over into the nearby creek. When passengers arrived the passengers were drenched in the mud.

Two were injured. Lewis H. Guggenberger of the United States Navy hospital corps had a finger dislocated and George S. Chubb, Pittsburgh, suffered a fractured hip.

"Swagger" Sticks to Rout Mashers

Dozens of girls and young women resorting from Europe on the several ships which docked in Boston today attracted attention by the "swagger" sticks they carried. Supplies brought out the information that the sticks, which were all armed with a short, sharp steel point, had been taken from the hands of the carriers of threatening letters.

WILLIAMS' DAUGHTER GAVE BLOOD

How George E. Williams, the insurance man who severed thousands of dollars on forged insurance policies, fought to save and how his daughter, Mrs. Frank M. Patch, gave up her blood for him five days before his death in a desperate effort to save his life before known today.

Investigation today also brought to light William No. 5 in Williams' life. She is a fireless married woman, a neighbor of Williams. He had been seen begging and knocking her.

Williams was taken to the Oakland Hospital, Boston, on June 16. He died there, on June 16. He died there, on June 16. He died there, on June 16.

Williams was suffering from pericarditis, a disease of the heart, due to worry. His wife and daughter, Mrs. Patch, visited him every day. He told in one of what was called him to worry, and he kept his wife and daughter absolutely in the dark as to what was troubling him and of what he had been guilty.

That he was literally frightened to death by fear of what was coming to him in the belief of the doctors today. And yet he wanted to live.

"If I get well, I'll give you an automobile," he said to Miss Emma A. Major of No. 10 Clayton street, Malden, his nurse.

He grew steadily weaker, and it was then that it was decided that he must have new blood.

Both his wife and his daughter stepped forward and told Dr. Charles U. Miller of No. 180 Marlborough street, and Dr. F. E. Park, the attending physician, that although their work consisted of the same, they maintained that his work is even more difficult than when he had the larger wage.

The account of Mrs. Williams' weak state of health, the physicians close the daughter for the test. The operation took three hours. Mrs. Patch gave up a great quantity of blood to save her father.

Williams rallied for a day, then grew weaker. Continued on Page 7, Column 2.

Jerome Rebuked by Judge Aldrich

Jerome spoke of Moses Grossman, Thaw's lawyer, as "the loquacious attorney," and was rebuked by the dignified judge, who asked him to withdraw the epithet.

Jerome did so. From today's proceedings to the Thaw case before Judge Aldrich in the Federal Court in Littleton.

Give Hearst Credit for 8-Hour Law

Rainey Tells Lobby Committee of Fight Begun in 1907.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—William Randolph Hearst was given credit for being the original advocate in the House of Representatives of the eight-hour law for employers by Representative Balfour of Illinois testifying before the United States Labor Investigating Committee. He said:

"The great fight for the eight-hour law was made by Mr. Hearst, a member of the House in 1907. We had a committee meeting late in the session. Mr. Hearst saw we lacked votes, and talked on the same point until we could get friends back to vote for it."

A related point was raised against the committee action, but Mr. Hearst deserves credit for getting the bill passed so soon as the Democrats got in power.

"Oilers Tell of $2 Cut in Wages

Promise of Better Pay Not Kept They Say.

John Dineen and Alexander S. Find the oilers for the elevated road, find the Board of Arbitration today how after many years of service with a weekly wage of $18, they had been cut to $16, although their work consisted of the same. Findley maintained that his work is even more difficult than when he had the larger wage.

Dineen told how while he and some dozen or more other oilers were working seven days a week, eight hours a day, the $2 reduction came, and although the change was made five years ago with promise for a return to better than the $18 still holds. Adams has been in the employ of the company for twenty-three years.

"Lord Ashburton" Admits $67 Theft

Charles F. Richards, better known by the police throughout the entire country as Lord Ashburton, appeared before Judge Ely in the Municipal Court today charged with stealing $67 from John A. Macdonald, and with the theft of a watch from the same man. He pleaded guilty and had his case placed on probation, with the promise that he make restitution. He told Judge Ely that he had lost found employment.

Policy King Adams' Son Is Bankrupt

NEW YORK, September 16.—Walter A. Adams, son of the late "A.P." Adams, the policy king, had filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court. Adams calls himself a trader in stocks. His liabilities are placed at $22,224.40, and the only assets listed by him are a second-hand automobile, a claim against the fire Grand Old Lady Company, which his brother, Albert Adams, Jr., holds.

FIGHT NOW GOES TO THE GOVERNOR

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, sent notice today that she will arrive here tomorrow to see Governor Felker to protest against her son being sent back to New York. Mrs. Thaw will make a personal appeal for justice for her son.

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 16.—The hearing before Governor Felker has been postponed until next Tuesday. Thaw will be taken to Woodville, where marshal will say whether he will be taken to Concord or not.

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 16.—Victory for Harry Thaw and defeat for William T. Jerome came in the United States District Court here today when Judge Edgar Aldrich suspended the federal writ of habeas corpus, which Thaw's lawyers had sued out last Saturday, pending the extradition proceedings.

Judge Aldrich granted suspension of the writ, with either side having the right at any time to apply for a resumption of the hearing.

THE RIGHTS OF THAW, THE COURT HELD, WOULD NOT IN ANY WAY BE MENACED BY A SUSPENSION OF THE WRIT

Thaw was ordered remanded to the custody of United States Marshal Eugene P. Nute and Sheriff Holman Drew of Chocoma County.

BITTER ARGUMENT ON BOTH SIDES

The argument of counsel on either side was bitter.

George F. Morris, of Thaw's counsel, denied and raved on the state of the Thaw camp and declared his side had been unable to get any assurance from Jerome that he would not agree to give Thaw a chance to appeal from the Governor's decision, if adverse.

The little court room in the National Bank building, which is used by the United States District Court when it sits here, was jammed to the last inch. There were many prettily-gowned women.

Girl Victim in Auto Crash Died Today

Driver of Car That Killed Portsmouth Teacher Is Held.

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 16.—Miss Court in Eggleston, a Portsmouth, N. H., school teacher, died here today after being injured in a head-on crash when the automobile in which she was riding collided on the Dover Road with a machine driven by Arthur O'Mahoney of Lawrence, Mass.

O'Mahoney was held by the police after the accident and will be arraigned in the local court today. A woman companion of Miss Eggleston escaped unhurt. The accident is said to have been due to Miss Eggleston's chauffeur being blinded by the headlights of the other machine.

The Dramatic Love Story of Evelyn Nesbit and Harry K. Thaw

CHAPTER XX

"In the midst of life we are in death."

"Thomas Paine."

Stanford White was enjoying himself thoroughly on the roof of Madison Square Garden when the Thaw party arrived. He had been in luck of the recent for a time, that being a privilege he had as one of the garden directors.

White spoke to Lionel Lawrence about the performance, which was getting into the fall swing of the first act. Then he walked out into the auditorium and saw out of one of the numerous tables joining the side of the place, Harry Stevens, who had the key privilege on the "roof," skipped with White a moment, then left the architect to his enjoyment of the music and the animated scene, both on and off the stage.

Toward the end of the first act Harry and Evelyn Thaw entered, with Beals and McCall. They had seats in the middle section, about half-way down.

There was a little confusion about the seats and for a few minutes, Thaw sat a few rows back. Then he came for and joined his wife and two children.

At 11 o'clock the Thaw party rose to although the performance was still on. Thaw led the way toward the elevator entrance, on the arm of Mr. McCall.

Thaw and Truxton Hotel (A) in behind.

Walked Back White.

Suddenly this exit program was changed by Thaw to a swift and shocking tragedy. Leaving his wife and children, he walked over toward the Twenty-sixth street side of the roof, near the table where Stanford White was sitting with Beals and the other guests.

Thaw passed around the table and sent a quick look at the Thaw party on the stage. The action of the play was fast—very fast, pretty girls, bright eyes and shining lights.

It was recalled afterwards that one of the singers of the company, seated by a lady of the Thaw party, was singing:

"I could have a thousand girls," grim comment was made on the coincidence of this song with what followed.

Suddenly Thaw began to crowd his way through groups of people, until he was within a few feet of the table at which Stanford White sat.

The architect, in the excitement of the moment, as he was seated at the table,

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

was looking at the Thaw party. He

In front of him, White naturally glanced. He saw a face to face with a man who hated him with wild, unreckoning rage.

The Tragedy.

White saw something else, too. He saw, clutched in Thaw's right hand, short-barreled, blue revolver. Thaw's finger was on the trigger and the hammer was rising, even as White gazed at him.

Stanford White was an energetic, quick-acting man. If he had come to gripe with Thaw in deadly struggle, he doubtless would have tried Thaw's half on of stage.

But White had no chance. He started, first one look at Thaw, to that from the chair. He never got squarely on his feet.

Thaw snarled: "You have rushed in with your gun."

White made no reply. He merely kept rising and getting very angry on his feet. He knew he knew that he was in grave danger. But he may have thought that the revolver in Thaw's hands was merely a broken blade, or a threat, but that Thaw would not shoot. The revolver broke over

Thaw's collar, and crashed into Stanford White's right shoulder.

The shock of the bullet stopped White from rising any more. He knew, by this time, that Thaw meant death for him.

"Crack!" the blue weapon barked a second time. The bullet struck White on the forehead, just over the right eye. He fell back with a thud. The bullet struck him in the head. He fell back with a

BROWNS SHOW HERE FOR LAST TIME TODAY

The Boston Braves will play their last game here today at Fenway Park. The team, which has been in the city for the past two weeks, will leave for their home in Milwaukee tomorrow. The game is expected to be a close one, as the Braves have been in excellent form recently. They have won four of their last five games, and are currently in first place in the National League. The Braves' manager, John M. Ward, expects a hard fight, but is confident of a victory. The game is scheduled for 7:30 P.M. and will be broadcast on the radio.

World Touring Teams Start Games Oct. 18

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The World Touring Teams will start their season on Oct. 18. The teams, which are made up of the best players from the various countries, will play a series of games in different parts of the world. The first game will be played in London, and will be a match between the United States and the United Kingdom. The game is expected to be a very close one, as both teams are very strong.

Is your job
a daily Marathon?
Fourteen hundred men took part in a 12-mile "Marathon" in New York City a few months ago. Their average weight was about 125 pounds. The means that with every step they came down with a 175,000 pound shoe!—an impact of 800,000,000 pounds to every mile they ran!

IN your daily work and recreation you cover several miles of floor and pavement in a Marathon all your own.

And the jar and strain on your muscles and nerves is just as heavy and severe as if you were in a race for a trophy instead of for your daily bread.

Wear O'Sullivan's Heels of new, live rubber, and save your spine and nervous system the jolt and jar of walking on hard leather. They will absorb the shock and make your step light and easy.

O'Sullivan's Heels are invisible cushions of springs, resilient rubber. They set but set a part, attached at your shoulders. A Name alone makes them just them, a brand shoe. You can't have the luxury. All shoemakers and shoe stores attach them to your shoes, where you can't see them, or at any other time. If you prefer, send a 10c and a tracing of your foot and we will mail you a pair. O'SULLIVAN RUBBER CO., 131 Hudson Street, New York.

The Newly Discovered Giganotosaurus That Roamed Africa Ages Ago

Here is another splendid drawing of the Gigantocranius Africanae, the most prodigious creature there has come to light. Our special artist has reconstructed the great land-dragon, and his sketch by it may lead to some day's discovery of its enormous size. Recent discoveries have revealed in Africa remains of a land-dragon whose length measured some 100 feet. The monster was discovered by German savants at Tendouku in Senegal, where they found the bones of a dragon which had been killed by a hunter. It is probable, or perhaps now it is certain, that the Museum of Natural History, South Kensington, London, will soon show the skeleton of this colossal beast as a new exhibit. If so, we shall see that Diplodocus was just 84 feet long, and stood 11 feet high at the hind end; while the African dragon was 100 feet 2 inches long, and stood 16 feet 9 inches high at the hind end. Its neck was certainly some 10 feet longer, and its head was certainly much larger than that of our American dinosaur.

Self Help For Nervous Persons

Can often be achieved by a simple change of food and drink.

Much nervousness is caused by coffee drinking—eminent medical authorities having demonstrated that the coffee drug, caffeine, is a definite nerve poison to many persons.

Coffee has no food value whatever, and is a deceitful friend. Under its use the nerves first become irritated; then so sensitive and "on edge" that a slight variation from general health often appears most serious to its victim.

However, Nature responds quickly to common-sense treatment, and right living frequently does more than medicine. So, if you value peace and comfort, try this easy experiment.

POSTUM

This pure food-drink made from prime wheat has a Java-like flavor and a fine dark brown color which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added.

It contains the genuine nourishing elements of the grain, but is absolutely free from the coffee drug, or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms.
Regular Postum must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A spoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a very palatable beverage instantly.

Thousands have been wonderfully benefited by using Postum instead of coffee—

A Last Chance for American Shipping

Such an enactment could not be objected to by any foreign nation on the basis of bad faith on the part of the United States. Its benefits are not limited to vessels owned by American citizens or registered under the laws of the United States, but are open to any vessel wherever owned, so long as it is built in the United States. This amendment covers the objection by foreign governments that the

Britain's Blunder About Our Fair

BY REV. DR. CHARLES F. AKED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—The British government, on the score of expense, declines to become a party to our expedition; the British people are at their wits' end to find some method by which they can remedy the blunder of their rulers. Press and public are fairly agreed that the action of the government does an injustice to the British people. Even among those who are hostile to the journals that libel by a base adulation of the aristocracy, protest in a supercilious kind of way that it would have been wiser to meet the wishes of the American people. The newspapers that represent the sound, serious, good-hearted British people are unanimous in condemnation of the policy of the United States and in support of the British Cabinet.

It is not the first time in British history that the people have been wiser than their rulers. It is not the first time that the better sense of the Anglo-American relations that the British people have stood out against the British government in the hostility to the people of this country.

From the beginning of the war until its close; and what I did with other Englishmen did. On the Sunday nearest to July 4, in the year 1862, my church in Liverpool printed, my Church gave in public service, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," with the American and British flags prominently displayed. It was thought it might be suggested that this was the only church in Great Britain where such a spirit obtained.

I am glad to hear that new newspaper offices for news and news-ought—and I saw them. And I heard them cheer America's success as well as the same thing now. As will be the names of the men there are two Englishmen. The England of the foreigners, who have ruled England for more than thirty years past, has been guilty in misunderstanding and in blundering. But the England of the English people, the English people, the English people, the English people, and sailing all day long, God, will continue to admire and love the American people.

There are two English people, though one is called England, can citizen sometimes fails to recognize the fact. There is the England of the Norman conquerors,

"THE glorious Fourth of July" is glorious in the eyes of the British people and they glory in it. The American people have always been proud of their country, but they have never been proud of their people—they only fought the British rulers. The British people were doing the same thing at the same time. They were fighting their wars, and they were proud of them. They were demanding for themselves the freedom which the colonial forces won on the hard ground of Vicksburg, Washington, and the Revolutionaries were their best friends in the world than they had among the earnest men in England, whose names are forever written with the deeds of the British people. Quakers, Unitarians, Congregationalists, Baptists were the unfeeling friends

During the terrible struggle between the North and South, the "leaders" of the British people were on the side of the South. The British people declined to be led. Aristocracy, learning, wealth, territorial position, the established church, the greater part of the French laws and English laws—and, of course, there were there spoken the Norman-French language and the English. Down to the beginning of the seventeenth century, incredible as this may seem, two juries had to be summoned, one from the old French borough, one from the English.

Which things, though absolutely true to literal fact, are "written allegorically." The wise American will not hold the British people re-ing men of Lancashire, starving, and looking upon their wives and children starving through the blockade of Southern ports which had produced in England a "cotton famine," held on to their belief in human liberty, and their faith in the American people—and cheered every Federal victory.

It was the same during the war with Spain. The British government was coldly indifferent. The British people were enthusiastically pro-American. I displayed the American flag in my home

THE OLD ONES

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

I DO not care for problem plays, I do not yearn to see
The erring and luxurious ways of high society.
I am not keen for strutting dukes who stand around and sneer,
Or belted earls, who bawl "Gudzo kns," whenever they appear.
I like the old-time stuff the best, where virtue scorned and spurned, Knocks plotting badness guily went when once the tide has turned.

I like to see a maiden wend before her father's door Instructed harshly to move on and to return no more.
I like to hear her murmur then, with many a shivering quake,
That rags are royal raiment when they're worn for virtue's sake.
I like to watch the villain try to lure her off by stealth,
And simply joy to hear her cry: "Away, I scorn your wealth!"

I like to see the hero thrust aside the proffered wine,
And say with beautiful disgust, "No demon rum for mine!"
I like to hear the villain say, as his dank brow be mops,
"He has escaped me for today; he ducked my knockout drops!"
I like to hear the villainess in accents tense with sorrow,

I like to see the lightning flash and hear the wild wind wail,
And listen to the thunder crash along the lonely trail;
Where heroines and hero meet and never seem to mind

The sound of the pursuers' feet about two jumps behind.
I like to wonder what they'll do when he arrests their flight,
Although I know, and so do you, that it will be all right.

Of heinous crimes and wedding chimes, and thrills and thrills and thrills.
You always knew just who was who and just what they would say;
In doping out how they'd turn out you never went astray.
